

What causes a monsoon ?
A Monsoon from the Arabic “MAWSIM“ which means “season ” arise due to a difference in temperatures between the Land mass and the adjacent ocean
The sun warms the land and the ocean differently, according to the southwest climate change causing the winds to play “tug of war” eventually switching directions bringing cooler moister air from over the ocean.
The wind reverse again at the end of the Monsoon season
